THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 10th, 1887

The Louisville Republican has made its appearance.

The President has signed the Inter-State Commerce Bill.

The Public Debt was reduced $9,000,000 during January.

The President vetoed seven private pension bills Saturday.

Greenup county now has a Democratic newspaper, called the Greenup Herald.

Postal Notes have to be written payable at any money order office now.

It is said that the resignation of Treasurer Jordan and Secretary Manning are in the hands of the President.

The State Board of Equalization meets in the city of Frankfort, today. It will begin its labors immediately.

Col. Will S. Hayes, the veteran journalist and world famed gong writer, has taken editorial charge of the Louisville News and Commercial.

Senator Hearst, of California, owns a newspaper which he says he never reads. His fortune is estimated at $40,000,000, but he probably does not know how much he is worth.

A terrible railroad accident occurred on the Central Vermont Railroad Saturday. Two passenger coaches and two sleeping cars left the track and plunged forty feet below into the White river. About sixty passengers were killed.

The Indiana Legislature at last elected Judge Turpie to succeed Senator Harrison in the Senate of the United States. The Labor Democrat, Robinson, voted on Thursday for Judge Turpie, thereby breaking the dead lock and giving the Democratic candidate the requisite number of votes.

The time has come when the orator is a thing of the past as moulder of public opinion. One newspaper of two thousand circulation has an audience of at least five thousand, and every paper is a calm dispassionate orator itself, which quietly gives the facts and arguments and leaves the masses to judge for themselves. This is the only way the masses can successfully be educated.—Morganfield Sun.

The next assembly should be composed of business men—men of middle age who have been tried and found faithful in financial matters, who know the value of a dollar, and who are in sympathy with the people upon all questions of public interest. As near as possible, too these men should be chosen from the non-professional, non-political classes. We have had too much fine talk, too much great genius, too many fine clothes; let us now have a little common sense.—Morganfield Sun.

The silly young woman, Miss Nina Van Zant who wants to marry August Spies, one of the condemned anarchists, should be permitted to do so if Spies is agreeable, (which is not doubted) and if after the urgent pleadings of her friends, to the contrary, she still desires to marry him. She also should be permitted to see him hang, which would so deeply impress upon her mind the degradation brought upon herself by her own willfulness that she would carry to her grave the recollection of an act which branded her one of the greatest fools of the nineteenth century.—Covington Enterprise.

Hon. T. D. Marcum, of Catlettsburg, seems to be the man the Democracy of Boyd and Lawrence counties have centered upon to go to the Legislature next winter. Mr. Marcum was Register of the Land Office for four years and has led a public life for many years. His thorough acquaintance in the two counties, his unbounded popularity, and his unimpaired popularity, would insure his making a strong canvass and a candidate that could only be beat by main strength and awkwardness. It would be a great sacrifice for Capt. Marcum to make the race, on account of the necessary neglect of his business, but let that be as it may, the Republicans realize the fact that he is "loaded" and they don't care to tackle him.—Ashland Correspondent to Greenup Gazette.

There is a movement in Louisville looking to the putting of free books in the primary departments of the city schools. The proposition, whether adopted or not, is a very good one, and a very suggestive one.

The people of Kentucky have no greater burden than the annual purchase of school text books. The monopoly in school books is an open secret, and the exorbitant prices paid for very inferior primary works has sorely tried the patience of the people. For years the Legislature has been looked to, to give some relief in the premises, hope deferred, alone, has been the reward of the long, lonesome waiting.—Hartford Herald.

When people lose patience with a newspaper editor for some slight mistake which appears in print, they should remember that if they had a hundred items to look up and report in one week, they would be liable to get some of them not exactly right. Whoever heard gossip that would exactly coincide if told by two different persons? We do not mean to report gossip, but we may not hear the same piece of news just as you heard it, and it is probable that yours may be the right way and ours the wrong, especially if you know all the connections; but you must not blame an editor if after diligently inquiring of what he considers reliable authority, a mistake after all should be made. It is remarkable how little patience even patient people have with an editor's slips.—Webster Times.

The newspapers of the country are singing the praises of the new South. New industries are claiming attention. Mills, factories and foundries are dotting the hill-sides and the valleys and the busy hum of industry is heard on all sides. In this respect Kentucky needs badly to be made new. The vast coal fields of the State need to be developed, and the boundless forests to be stripped of their wealth. The spirit of improvement promises to spread, and "the grand old Commonwealth" shows signs of waking up. We need to be pried out of the "rut." We want more business and less politics, more work and less talk. We want railroads, which will cheapen fuel, open up new markets and cheapen the cost of transportation. With cheap coal will come manufactures and increased population. Kentucky is a grand old State, with many natural advantages, and the young men who don't want to "go West," but are willing to work, must have a chance. The opportunity is at home, and the need of the times is to make an opening for it. A new Kentucky must answer back cheerily to the new South and its busy and prosperous people—prosperous because busy, and busy by reason of developing their own resources.—Georgetown Times.

The selection of Frank Hiscock as Senator from New York is a pleasant surprise for those people who are interested in rescuing the Senate from the grasp of the millionaires. Hiscock, although he is in comfortable circumstances, was not chosen because of his money, but because he is an able and successful man. Miller, the man who was defeated, has no other recommendation except the possession of a large barrel of money. It is a standing menace, if not a disgrace, to the United States Senate that it has grown to be an assembly of millionaires. Large corporations and monopolies send their representatives to the Senate to influence legislation in their favor. A vote there is worth almost five votes in the House, and it is easier for money to carry a Congressional district. And so the Senate chamber has gotten filled up with bondholders. California sends a forty millionaire, whose chief road to fame is that he corrupted Legislatures in order to gain his fortune. Ohio sends a Senator whose distinction rests upon the fact that he is at the head of the most tremendous and most grinding monopoly on the continent. Almost every one of the great Pacific railroads has its men sitting in our House of Lords, and the silver mines of the West have a large and energetic delegation. Illinois has just sent in the gallant Logan's place a man known to fame by his money, and Indiana is trying to re-elect a lawyer who has fattened off the fees of monopolies. Under such a state of the case the defeat of any boodle man and an election based on merits comes as delightful relief.—Louisville Post.

NEW YORK FASHION LETTER.

Velvet and Other Dresses—New Colors—A Return to Simplicity in Spring Costumes.

[Special Correspondence.] All the predictions with regard to velvet, both for costumes and their accessories, have been realized the present season. Wherever fashionable people have met at gay winter entertainments, there have appeared these most superb dresses, both in deep rich tones and in exquisite pale tints. Not always have these materials appeared in a complete dress, however, for just as there are corsets of velvet with skirts of lace, tulle, silk tulle or embroidered muslin, there are also corsets of net, lace or India mull, with skirts of velvet, with portions of the diaphanous fabric draping the skirt. Another popular alliance with velvet is the soft beautiful faille Francaise, this corded silk being made up in conjunction with velvet, in visiting and dinner gowns of exceeding richness. Black lace dresses preserve all their popularity, and will long continue to do so, for there is no prettier, more elegant, convenient or becoming toilet. Ladies who like change introduce variety by having drapings of striped transparent silk gauze, magnificently beaded tabliers or panels, or they produce a gay effect by the introduction of trails of exquisite French flowers upon skirt and corsage.

Sample cards of the new spring colors have arrived from abroad, and by these it will be seen that all shades of brown, from reddish and cream brown to seal and golden, will be highly popular once more. There are some uncommonly rich dyes in Normandy blue, several distinct shades of violet and heliotrope, and also in wine colors. All the sickly artistic hues are conspicuous by their absence, with the exception of the pale half-shades of apple, willow and frog-green. These are hardly new, as in the early winter season they were thrust upon the trade with the assurance that these most trying tints would "take" in America, the land of the blonde and the home of the superlatively fair. Not so, however, thus far. These artistic fabrics still lend a certain delicate vermillion look to the show windows, but have fallen most noticeably short in favor of sale, either in dress fabrics or millinery uses. Gray, however, is triumphant, and all shades of this refined color, dear to the hearts of all French women, will be in high vogue next season.

A Nineteenth-street designer of high-class novelties, has among his early spring creations, a stylish gown modeled from French dress of nuns' gray faille Francaise combined with velvet of the new, deep but brilliant shade of Venetian red, a color now the rage in Paris. The pattern is illustrated above. The plain velvet underskirt is crenelated at the foot, the blocks faced underneath with satin of the exact shade of the velvet. The tunic portion opens all the way down the front, showing the red velvet skirt beneath. The sides, however, are caught together at intervals with gray satin ribbon bows, and elaborate ornaments of silver and plumb beads. The Walking costume in Garibaldi part is net velvet and gray double breasted wool goods. It opens broadly in a V-shape notwithstanding, which space is closed with a plastron of red velvet. There is an embroidery of gray silk soutache beyond this plastron, with an ornament in bead-work as a finish. Epaulets of the beads adorn the shoulders, there is a crenelated girdle at the belt, and a feature of the model is the plowman's smock sleeve ending in a plaited silk cuff.

We have announced to us for the coming season a return to simplicity, relative simplicity, of course, which will relieve us of part of the weight of stuffs which now form in most cases an integral part of the toilet. There are promised fewer draperies, and above all fewer voluminous draperies, and a few different fabrics for the same dress. We are promised skirts devoid of frilleries and such, even without any draperies whatever in the back, but simply hung in broad plaits, as witness model No. 2, also from the design of the one above referred to. With this skirt will be worn a deep over-drapery, hemmed or delicately embroidered or braided, and draped across the front in easy, graceful folds. En suite is a Louis Quinze jacket with large double flaps at the side, a looped-back arranged en position and with Garrick shoulder capes, shaped to match the flaps on the jacket, which opens over an embroidered waistcoat, and is garnished on each side with large buttons of bronze and enamel. There is a rage in New York this winter for fancy sleighing hoods of every sort. First come the Russian hoods of seal, bordered with fur, then follow the English model of fur-lined satin, which are veritable protectors against the stinging pinches of Jack Frost. The Normandy toque is the most expensive, as it is made of sable or seal skin. This has a high peak on top and pulls down over the ears exactly like a man's cap.

FARMERS and dairymen must not place too much reliance in the oleomargarine law raising the price of butter. If better prices are to be had, they will be for good butter alone, for the day when carelessly-made and badly-kept butter will sell at a paying price has gone. In fact, nothing today helps the sale of oleomargarine so much as the presence of this poor dairy butter in our markets. Consumers want pure butter, but where they can not get it sweet and pleasant to the taste they will, of necessity, take oleomargarine.—N. E. Farmer.

If well laid, a stone drain should last as long as one of tile. If a considerable amount of stone is used and there is a good outlet a stone drain will never fill up so that some water will not pass through it. Too great a fall or too large an amount of water is apt to displace stones. Hence attempts to make the stone in the form of an arch often fail. One side or the other is liable to be displaced, and presently a stone is pushed into the channel. Earth accumulates around this and the efficiency of the drain is impaired. The set in a ditch just wide enough to receive it can not easily be displaced.—Waterman Rural.

There are few markets in which enough difference is made in price of hay on account of quality. Excepting those who feed fancy horses, few men are particular enough what they give their teams. Hay full of weeds and stained with salt sells within two or three dollars per ton as high as that which is bright and good. The higher price is generally the cheapest, even leaving out the comfort and the satisfaction of the stock eating it. There is only one exception to this rule. Clover hay is always low in price. Even when well cured it usually sells low. Much clover, however, is badly stained and often musty, as it is the kind of hay most difficult to cure well.—Chicago Tribune.

The advertisement of the old reliable establishment, The Storrs and Harrison Co., Painesville, Ohio, appears in this issue, offering dower and vegetable seeds, roses, plants, grape vines, fruit and ornamental trees. They are running one of the most complete nurseries in the world, and issue a large, attractive catalogue which they will mail you free, on application. They have no traveling agents, and are only responsible for orders sent direct. Give them a trial and save dealers' commissions. They guarantee satisfaction.

When you swear off swearing at the same time, it never will be missed.—Philadelphia Call.

How often is the light of the household clouded by signs of melancholy or irritability on the part of the ladies. Yet they are not to be blamed, for they are the result of ailments peculiar to the female system, and men know not of it. But the cause may be removed and joy restored by the use of Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription," which, as a tonic and nervine for debilitated women, is certain, safe and pleasant. It is beyond all compare the great healer of women.

Life is short, but it isn't half so short as some men are all through life.—N. Y. Independent.

"Consumption Cure" would be a truthful name to give to Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery," the most efficacious medicine yet discovered for arresting the early development of pulmonary disease. But "consumption cure" would not sufficiently indicate the scope of its influence and usefulness. In all the many diseases which spring from a derangement of the liver and blood the "consumption cure" is a safe and sure specific. Of all druggists.
